Mrs. Lula Allen, aged 19, after experience with a young husband at Litchfield, Ky., has married Wm. Oiler, aged 73. She probably prefers to be an old man's darling to a young man's slave.

The iridomyrmex humulin Mayr, otherwise known as the Argentine ant, has found a foothold in the South and threatens to become a plague in all warm latitudes. It dotes on sweet things and has a bitter taste that destroys everything it gets into. It is so small that it is almost invisible.

It was the sanest Fourth on record. There were only 16 deaths from fireworks in the entire country, whereas the number sometimes goes into the hundreds. Only 874 were injured instead of several thousand. Forty-one persons lost their lives in a variety of accidents, 28 by drowning and 6 of them at Louisville.

Two bandits adopted Western methods and robbed an Illinois Central passenger train's express and mail car near Batesville, Miss., Friday morning and made their escape. They detached the car, ran it several miles and blew the safe with dynamite and after getting from $500 to $1,000 made their escape. The express messenger was R. E. Hook, formerly in charge of the American office in this city.

A Sane Fourth.

The 4th of July was a quiet day so far as fireworks figured. There were no accidents worthy of notice and everybody had a good time, nearly all the business houses being closed and business was about suspended.

BIG DRAWING.

Positions On Primary Ballot Will Be Settled Today.

There have been quite a number of drawings for premiums during the past few months, but there will be a big drawing in the County Clerk's office this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The drawing is for positions on the primary ballot. All candidates have been notified to attend to attend. Seventy-nine petitions were filed. How Mr. Stowe is to get that number in his office at one time has not yet been revealed, but the court room is not far off.

The candidates will meet at the Clerk's office this afternoon at 2 o'clock and draw for places on the primary ballot. There are 34 candidates for county offices and 43 for district places and city councilmen.

July 30, which is also Woodmen's Day, the combined lodges of Hopkinsville uniting in the determination to make it a monster demonstration of Woodcraft.

The date selected this year is very fortunate—the farmers everywhere being up with their work and ready for a period of recreation—and indications point to record breaking crowds. The railroads entering Madisonville offer reduced rates.

Louisville spent the quietest Fourth in its history, but fatalities were not lacking. Six men and boys seeking relief from the excessive heat tabooed fireworks for swimming and boating and were drowned.

GOLF DREAM THAT CAME TRUE

The Drive Made by an Englishman Was Regarded as Impossible Achievement.

A story of a golfer's dream that came true comes from the Rochford Hundred Golf club, near South-end-on-Sea.

One of the members, E. Simpson, entering the club house, said he dreamed the previous evening that he had driven a ball over a sheet of water bounded by a high hedge and a wire fence, on the green and into the hole in one shot.

"Of course, that is the Pond hole, the short fifth," laughed the member.

"What is the betting against your dream coming true?" asked one. "I give you a hundred to one in sovereigns." "And I give a thousand pounds to ten pounds," said a sporting city magnate.

Mr. Simpson could see nothing in these tempting odds except the sure loss of his money. To hole out in one comes to few golfers in a lifetime, so he made no bets. How keen is his chagrin on this score may be imagined when what followed is related.

He went out to play on the crowded course. At the Pond tee his partner reminded him of his vision and Mr. Simpson laid down his ball for an easy iron shot, the hole being a "bogey three."

He said afterwards that he felt an eerie sensation, and shook at the knees. He was sure he did not keep his "eye on the ball," or rather his "mind's eye."

The couple in front stood near the green awaiting eventualities. Straight for the pin came the ball. It dropped gently on the grass 20 feet away, and, with its last revolution, trickled into the hole.

A wild whoop and frantic gesticulations intimated to Mr. Simpson that his dream had been fulfilled; also that he had lost a small fortune by declining the bets offered him.—London Express.

British Cows Which Eat Fish.

Dried coalfish, unsalted, is eaten by the inhabitants of the Faroe Islands (between Shetland and Iceland) or their cows, says a consular report.

The fish, which is of the cod type, is considered good for cows, as it enables them, it is stated, to yield an ample supply of rich milk. The dried fish is not cooked before being eaten; it is merely laid on stones and then pounded with stones or hammers.

Slighted Johnson.

Men who become suddenly rich should be judged leniently. They have many temptations from which the rest of us, happily, delivered. Mr. John Johnson, a man of this class, was desirous to be known as of a literary turn of mind, and to that end proceeded to purchase a library. One of his purchases was an old dictionary, which, being somewhat out of repair, was sent to the binder's. When it was returned to the purchaser he found printed on its back the words, "Johnson's Dictionary."

The slight threw him into a furious passion, and he demanded of the messenger:

"Why didn't he put the full name on, John Johnson's Dictionary?"

His Lack of Will.

"I used to think my husband had such a strong will," she complained.

"He has never seemed to me," her friend replied, "to be a man who was lacking in will power. Is he a slave to drink or tobacco or anything like that?"

"Oh, no. He gave up smoking three years ago, and I got him to go on the water wagon at the first of the year. He hasn't tasted any kind of liquor since."

"It seems to me you ought to be proud of him. A man who can give up smoking and absolutely refrain from tasting any kind of strong drink must have a will that is extraordinary."

"Perhaps it is as you say, but I have been trying for more than a year to get him to give up the habit of nodding in the affirmative when he says yes at the telephone. He just can't seem to quit it."

"Nothing this morning. Say, I've just received your circular containing the announcement that you're going to tack the usual increase of 10 cents a month on the price per ton, and that I'd better buy my next winter supply now, while it's at the bottom figure."

"Well, I see by an item in a scientific paper I take that there's enough coal in the United States, making due allowance for the increase in population and coal consumption per capita, to last the country 5,000 years, and I've decided that I don't need to be in such a thundering hurry to get my next winter's coal in. I'll chance it. Good-by."

Explaining the Needle.

A typesetter in a printing house became very adroit in explaining the large number of misprints for which he was responsible. Even when he changed his work and became a waiter in a restaurant his skill did not forsake him.

One day he had served a guest with a plate of soup and was turning away, when he was called back sharply.

"This is an outrage!" cried the indignantly dinner. "I find a needle in my soup! What does this mean?"

"Just a misprint, sir," explained the former typesetter. "It should have been a noodle."—Youth's Companion.

Before Fame Came.

A widely admired campaign speaker in Nebraska, who had been billed to make the principal address at a political meeting in Lincoln, was obliged at the last moment to cancel his appointment.

William Jennings Bryan was chosen to fill the vacant place. Mr. Bryan, however, knowing that he was to act as substitute for an older and more popular man, was rather nervous. His apprehension was increased when the chairman announced him in the following manner:

"Feller citizens: This here's the substitute for our gallant an' admired leader, unfortunately taken sick. I don't know what this gent can do; but time was short an' we had to take what we could git."

FIRE'S GOOD WORK

How a Great Forest Conflagration Proved a Blessing in Disguise.

BY JAMES HARRISON.

Elmer held Watson guiltless of his innumerable offenses against him because of Watson's wife.

In the southwest, where men are quick to avenge insult, Watson dwelt unharmed, mouthings imprecations against Elmer, holding him up to the scorn of the township. No one was braver than Watson when chatting with his cronies in front of the Westwood hotel and boasting what he would do when he met Elmer face to face. But Elmer only laughed at Watson's threats.

The men were neighbors. Elmer owned five hundred acres and herded his cattle upon the government ranges. Watson was a sheep man, and that would have been enough to cause a quarrel, had not the long feud been settled by a line drawn clear across the state, separating the spheres of the two antagonists. Elmer, on his arrival at Westwood, had gone to call upon his neighbor to talk over their boundaries. But he found Watson in a drink stupor and a sated girl of twenty-two cooking upon the cheap oil stove in the wretched cabin.

"Mrs. Watson?" asked Elmer, donning his hat. "I am Elmer; I have taken the neighboring range. I came to talk over—" Then he paused in embarrassment and saw the wounded pride on her face.

"Mr. Watson shall see you tomorrow," said the girl quietly, and Elmer withdrew, wondering and dismayed that such a girl should be bound to such a man.

He halted at the back of the cabin to fix his boot. Watson, thinking that he had gone, sat up on the couch.

"You—" he yelled, uttering a vile oath, "I've trapped you at last. You thought I was sleeping, didn't you, and that you could bring that man into my home! I know that you've been meeting him while I was tending sheep on the range. I'll—I'll—" He staggered across the cabin toward the girl. Elmer heard the cheap tinware clatter upon the stove and strode back into the cabin. Watson was standing over his wife in an attitude of impending assault. Elmer took him by the shoulders and ran him back across the room.

"I don't believe in interfering between a man and his wife—ordinarily," he said. "But if you ever lay a finger upon this lady I'll shake your teeth down your rum-soaked throat, Savvée!"

Watson fell back with a groan and Elmer, releasing him, departed with sudden realization of the folly of his quixotic action. It would go hard with Mrs. Watson now. He dared not look at her as he passed out of the door.

He met her in the town next day and was relieved to see that she bore no marks of violence. She nodded very slightly as she passed him. Elmer had no excuse for speaking to her.

The next time he met her was when his cattle had strayed near Watson's boundary. She was seated upon the ground in the lush grasses, almost hidden by them. Elmer's keen ears had heard her sobs before he saw her.

He dismounted from his horse and went toward her awkwardly, and stood looking down at her. She sprang to her feet and faced him; her face was scarlet and the tears were still upon her cheeks.

Elmer stretched out his hands and grasped hers closely. "Mrs. Watson—forgive me," he said. "It just makes my blood boil. If ever I can help you—"

"No, you cannot help me," she said, turning her face away.

"But you are only a girl," he exclaimed. "You cannot have been married long. You have all your life been for you; you cannot endure to be linked in this hideous way for years. You—"

"You must not say any more," Mr. Elmer, she answered coldly. "My troubles are of my own creating. I must bear them alone. I—"

She paused and her face blanched. She looked round and Elmer's eyes followed hers. Ten yards distant Watson was lying in the grass, regarding them, a sneer on his face. Elmer hesitated a moment, and then strode away.

He learned something of her story a few days later from some of the townspeople. Emmeline Watson had been married to her husband six months before they moved west from St. Louis. She was the orphan daughter of a famous architect who had killed himself in shame at his impending bankruptcy. Ignorant of the world, she had fallen a victim to the coarse, good-looking traveling man who had told her he loved her. They were married; six weeks later she learned that Watson was a drunkard and an ex-convict. She had prevailed on him to go west, to make a new start. For a time he had tried to reform, but his evil nature had proved dominant and he had shamefully abused and ill-treated her. Yet she seemed to cling to him all the more because of it.

Watson spread the story of his wife's encounter with Elmer through Westwood. Some day, he boasted, he would kill him. But when the men met Watson skulked past, or turned down a side street, pretending not to have seen him. Meanwhile Elmer was deliberating. If he interfered again he would take some irrevocable step. But he knew that Watson's insinuations were true; he loved Emmeline Watson, and in the few short encounters which they had had he had discerned in her own heart an answering inclination toward him. But he knew, also, that so long as Watson lived she would be true to him.

He had controlled his rising passion though it went hard with him. At night, lying in his lonely cabin, the thought of Emmeline's beautiful face and clear eyes, the knowledge of her truth and honor maddened him. She was the one woman for him; so long as he lived his love for her would be an integral part of his being. His passion drove him forth to mount his horse and gallop furiously across the ranges under the stars, returning exhausted, his horse sweating and foaming, when the sun appeared over the eastern hills.

The men were neighbors. Elmer owned five hundred acres and herded his cattle upon the government ranges. Watson was a sheep man, and that would have been enough to cause a quarrel, had not the long feud been settled by a line drawn clear across the state, separating the spheres of the two antagonists. Elmer, on his arrival at Westwood, had gone to call upon his neighbor to talk over their boundaries. But he found Watson in a drink stupor and a sated girl of twenty-two cooking upon the cheap oil stove in the wretched cabin.

"Mrs. Watson?" asked Elmer, donning his hat. "I am Elmer; I have taken the neighboring range. I came to talk over—" Then he paused in embarrassment and saw the wounded pride on her face.

"Mr. Watson shall see you tomorrow," said the girl quietly, and Elmer withdrew, wondering and dismayed that such a girl should be bound to such a man.

He halted at the back of the cabin to fix his boot. Watson, thinking that he had gone, sat up on the couch.

"You—" he yelled, uttering a vile oath, "I've trapped you at last. You thought I was sleeping, didn't you, and that you could bring that man into my home! I know that you've been meeting him while I was tending sheep on the range. I'll—I'll—" He staggered across the cabin toward the girl. Elmer heard the cheap tinware clatter upon the stove and strode back into the cabin. Watson was standing over his wife in an attitude of impending assault. Elmer took him by the shoulders and ran him back across the room.

"It was empty. Elmer shouted with joy. Doubtless the fugitives had been warned in time. They must have fled north along the open range toward Westwood. And by this path, if he should hasten, he could still escape alone. He turned his tired nag's head and spurred him relentlessly.

The animal sniffed the breeze, laden with smoke and flying sparks and galloped madly for safety. Horse and rider were as one now in their desire. But presently a cloud of smoke rolled down on them; a banner of flame drifted across their path. The road was blocked. They were trapped, ringed about with flame. The horse refused to go forward and stood, trembling with terror, its feet planted obstinately in the ground. Elmer dismounted and tried to penetrate with his eyes the smoky wall around him.

He met her in the town next day and was relieved to see that she bore no marks of violence. She nodded very slightly as she passed him. Elmer had no excuse for speaking to her.

The next time he met her was when his cattle had strayed near Watson's boundary. She was seated upon the ground in the lush grasses, almost hidden by them. Elmer's keen ears had heard her sobs before he saw her.

He dismounted from his horse and went toward her awkwardly, and stood looking down at her. She sprang to her feet and faced him; her face was scarlet and the tears were still upon her cheeks.

Elmer stretched out his hands and grasped hers closely. "Mrs. Watson—forgive me," he said. "It just makes my blood boil. If ever I can help you—"

"No, you cannot help me," she said, turning her face away.

"But you are only a girl," he exclaimed. "You cannot have been married long. You have all your life been for you; you cannot endure to be linked in this hideous way for years. You—"

"You must not say any more," Mr. Elmer, she answered coldly. "My troubles are of my own creating. I must bear them alone. I—"

She paused and her face blanched. She looked round and Elmer's eyes followed hers. Ten yards distant Watson was lying in the grass, regarding them, a sneer on his face. Elmer hesitated a moment, and then strode away.

He learned something of her story a few days later from some of the townspeople. Emmeline Watson had been married to her husband six months before they moved west from St. Louis. She was the orphan daughter of a famous architect who had killed himself in shame at his impending bankruptcy. Ignorant of the world, she had fallen a victim to the coarse, good-looking traveling man who had told her he loved her. They were married; six weeks later she learned that Watson was a drunkard and an ex-convict. She had prevailed on him to go west, to make a new start. For a time he had tried to reform, but his evil nature had proved dominant and he had shamefully abused and ill-treated her. Yet she seemed to cling to him all the more because of it.

Watson spread the story of his wife's encounter with Elmer through Westwood. Some day, he boasted, he would kill him. But when the men met Watson skulked past, or turned down a side street, pretending not to have seen him. Meanwhile Elmer

EVERY IN SOUTH AMERICA

Timberlines of the Forest Are Bought and Sold Freely—$300 the Average Price.

The Madre de Dios is a majestic waterway, some 400 yards wide at Puerto Alianza. Later on it joins another river to become the Beni; farther down again, it flows into the Marañon, and finally—more than 1,000 miles below Alianza—is merged into the mighty Amazon.

On the banks of the Amazon there are large towns boasting of a so-called civilization, but in the remote reaches of the affluents and sub-affluents, and in the great forest tracts along these spacious waterways, force and nature reign supreme. Human, animal and plant life battle hard for existence.

In this vast and little known region law and order are not codified; they are merely the product of self-defense, says a writer in the Wide World.

If an evil doer be caught retribution is swift and terrible. And slaves—the aboriginal forest savages—are bought and sold freely. When I was in the Madre de Dios the market price of a man was $300, a woman $200, and a child $50, although for good men used to collecting caucho (low grade wild rubber), much higher prices prevailed. One land owner I know had just bought 20 families—say 80 persons in all—for $15,000. I myself was offered 100 people by their master, who was retiring from business. He appeared quite surprised when I told him that Englishmen did not deal in human flesh.

Nevertheless, it must be confessed that these slaves are not, as a rule, unhappy. Instead of wandering wild about the woods, they are brought into the rubber camps, given some clothes, a gun, and introduced to alcohol. Then they are sent out into the forest to cut down caucho trees and collect the rubber that flows from the trunks. It is true that, in some places, flogging and other ill treatment follow when the quantity of rubber picked is small, and on the other hand, increased supplies of alcohol, good guns and ammunition, and finery for the women are attendant on a good crop. Moreover, if the ill treatment be excessive—that is, more than the men think they deserve—the next morning may find the master assassinated. During my stay in the district two slave owners and their staff met their fate in this way—all were wiped out in a sight.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the Membrane of the Cochlear Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, deafness will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by a certain condition which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured. Hall's Colicure Cure is the best for cures of this kind.

DANCE PLANS ARE TOLD BY MISS COMSTOCK

With a view toward solving one of the vital social problems of a big city Miss Ethel Comstock, under the auspices of the Diocesan Mission of Chicago, has originated the plan of introducing varied forms of entertainment, with dancing parties as one of the main features, in one of the oldest and most aristocratic congregations—St. James' Episcopal church at Ontario and Cass streets. St. James' parish is in the midst of a large rooming house district.

"Little business people, who are the backbone of our country," says Miss Comstock, "having no place to entertain friends and not financially able to patronize the better theaters and entertainments, are prone to turn to things worth while. To afford for this class of young men and women an opportunity for social intercourse the Tuesday Evening club has been established, with dancing as the main attraction. A play will be given after Easter."

Miss Comstock is an Indiana girl. She has spent some years in Porto Rico working among the poor. She was the only white person who weekly accompanied a party to Leper Island in the harbor of San Juan, carrying to the afflicted periodicals and messages of good cheer.

Throws Child to Wolves.

Throwing his child to the wolves, father committed a desperate act near Volograd, Russia, some days ago. A peasant named Grusnieff, accompanied by his wife and four-year-old child, was travelling by sleigh to Volograd. Towards dusk, when only a few miles from the town, he suddenly came on a pack of wolves. Grusnieff's wife, in her terror, suggested that he should appease the famished beasts by flinging them the child. This, however, the man at first refused to do, continuing to belabor his horses. At length, seeing that the wolves were gaining on the sleigh, he flung the child into the road. His sacrifice was in vain, for the wolves, discarding the living bundle, flew to the attack with renewed fury, and at length dragged the peasant from the sleigh. When the horses arrived in the town the woman was found lying unconscious in the sleigh. The child, which had not suffered the slightest injury, was found lying peacefully sleeping on the road.

"Women are not heroic after all." "How now, Diavolo, how now?" You frequently hear of a man refusing to have his hair cut until a certain party comes into power."

"Well?"

"Has any suffragette vowed not to powder her nose until the cause is victorious?"

Let the Others Do It.

"Master—this secret early in life, son," said old Mr. Polonius.

"What is it, dad?"

"You needn't chase your hat when it blows off. If you puff up and look pompous other people will chase it for you. And this applies to a great many other things as well."

In Training.

"I did not know you were in athletic training?"

"Just lately. You see there is to be a Sunday school picnic next week and I'll have to go along to carry the baskets and to pull the kids out of the river."

He Got Damaged.

An amusing case was heard at Gaithersburg (County Westmeath) the other day. Thomas McCann claimed compensation from Mrs. Mary Brady for injury to his stock by a sow. "Your warships," said McCann, "her sow ate a goat of mine and made a great fool of me. The sow is such a terror that if any of my children were out she would eat 'em too." The magistrate: "Is she a tiger?" McCann: "Bedad, your worship, she's worse. I tried to get one of the kid's legs before she was gone altogether, but she was so smart swallowing my poor kid that I couldn't even get a bit of her." Mrs. Brady gave evidence defending her sow. McCann: " Didn't she eat a kid's back and her stomach, her paws, and even swallowed her eyebrows? If she got my little children she would have eaten them to their boots. Why, she would eat my house!" Mrs. Brady: "She could eat anything." McCann: "I believe that." McCann was awarded half a crown and costs.

Disposing of Competition.

A male student competing with 30 girls in a bread-making contest at the University of Nevada the other day won the second prize and came very near to getting the first. We do not know whether the young student in question will eventually make the manufacture of the staff of life his life's work, but the outcome of the contest convinces us anew that the modern woman, no matter what she got her education at some university or some county district school, knows very little about the art of bread-making. The girls of today rather play tennis or study Ibsen than bother their pretty heads about bread-making, knowing full well that if they ever get married they can procure better and more wholesome bread than they could ever hope to produce themselves.

The Greatest Woman.

Who was or is the greatest woman in all history? Two hundred Kansas teachers answered the question and with enthusiasm and unanimity the judges awarded the prize to the one who made this reply: "The wife of a farmer of moderate means who does her own cooking, washing, ironing, sewing, brings up a family of boys and girls to be useful members of society, and finds time for intellectual improvement."

On Pennsylvania Farm.

Here is one of the stories, says the Americus Greeting, from the old man's row in front of the barber shop: One man said back in Pennsylvania they farmed the land where the hills were so steep that when they planted potatoes one man had to hold them in a furrow while another man covered them up. When they dug them in the fall they were simply allowed to roll to the bottom of the hill before any attempt was made to pick them up.

A New Face.

Mrs. Platt and her little son Tommy frequently went to St. John's church and the little boy had become familiar with the minister's face. One Sunday morning another minister was filling the pulpit. Tommy seemed rather troubled. Finally he leaned over to his mother and in a very audible whisper said: "Mother, what's become of St. John?"

PUTTING ONE OVER ON PAPA

Modern Miss Joelled Her Father Into Believing That She Had Refused Estimable Young Man.

"You know, dear," said the young man nervously to the pretty girl, "I'm really frightened about speaking to your father; he's so awfully sure of himself, you know."

"Is that all that's causing the delay?" inquired the modern miss, dryly. "If that's so, just leave it to me. I'll manage father."

Accordingly next morning she approached paterfamilias as he potted plants to the accompaniment of a choice Havana and carpet slippers.

"Papa," she gurgled, with feigned mirth, as she took his arm, "what do you think? That young fool Perkins has proposed to me! Just fancy! Of course, I refused him!" And the lady doubled up in incoherent joy.

"But papa shook himself free and tugged with the fury of a baited bull as he stormed:

"What! Refused young Perkins—that estimable young man? Why, I'm ashamed of you! You modern girls never know when you're lucky! You'll make it up with him at once—at once, I say—and don't let me have any nonsense!"

And papa never knew the reason for the peals of laughter which issued from the drawing room that evening when Edwin Perkins ecstatically greeted the dainty Clara.—Answers.

Perhaps a Tragic Comedy.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIAOld French Furniture.

The old French cabinet makers, like the old masters in violin making, had the fashion of stamping their names on their manufactures. Today a cabinet or secretaire with the name of an old French master cabinet maker, maître ébéniste, may bring a great price. Such was the case a short time ago when a commode signed C. C. Saurier, M. E., brought in Paris $25, 200.

Little Doubt About It.

Married a month, a young man told the magistrate that his wife had done the following things: Torn up the marriage certificate, pawned the ring, torn up her wedding-dress, assaulted him. She followed him to court, he added, but he managed to dodge her. The Clerk: "You took her for better or worse, and you seem to have got the worse."

No Other Newspaper in the World Gives So Much at So
Low a Price.

This is a time of great events and you will want the news accurately and promptly. The Democrats, for the first time in sixteen years, will have the Presidency and they will have the Presidency and they will also control both branches of Congress. The political news is sure to be of the most absorbing interest.

There is a great war in the Old World, and you may read of the extinction of the vast Turkish Empire in Europe, just as a few years ago you read how Spain lost her last foot of soil in America, after having ruled the empire of half the New World.

The World long since established a record for impartiality, and anybody can afford its Thrice-a-Week edition, which comes every other day in the week, except Sunday. It will be of particular value to you now. The Thrice-a-Week World also abounds in other strong features, serial stories, humor, markets, cartoons; in fact, everything that is to be found in a first class daily.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the Hopkinsville Kentuckian together for one year for $2.65.

VANITY'S BIG TOLL

Is Fed by Great Destruction of Life.

Silk for Millions of Wearers That 200,000,000 Worms Die to Provide —They Live Only to Work Interesting Data.

Women who deck themselves out in silks, and men, too, for silk enters into their ties and socks and other garments that some can afford to buy, as well as into most of the things worn by femininity, concern themselves with the awful destruction of life that is necessary to permit their vanity to have sway. About 15,000,000 worms are killed every year to make silk for use of the hosiery and underwear manufacturers of the United States alone in the manufacture of their products. This statement was made by H. F. Hofer, a manufacturer of Paterson, N. J., in an address at a recent convention of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers, held in Philadelphia.

Mr. Hofer presented figures to show that the manufacturers consume around 5,000,000 pounds of silk annually, and that it requires 3,000 cocoons to make a pound, in other words, 3,000 worms give up their lives to produce each pound of the raw material.

He gave the number of the worms that must die to give to the world all the silk that is produced in a year as about 200,000,000,000. "The silk worm, without sex, is a mere being destined to perform functions of a most unselfish manner," said Mr. Hofer in his most interesting address. "This worm knows nothing but duties and obligations. It does more work relatively than any other creature in existence, because from its first day of life until its last it is working uninterruptedly without sleep or rest of any sort."

"True enough, its work might by human beings be considered to be an enviable occupation, since it consists of eating and nothing else. In the six weeks of life this little creature eats all that is necessary to enable its growth to more than a thousand times its original size."

"At the first hour of life the total weight of these 200,000,000,000 amounts to about 500,000 pounds, and after about six weeks this lot of little creatures will have done away with about 10,000,000,000 pounds of mulberry leaves furnished by about 40,000 mulberry trees."

"The growing of the worm is so fast that it has to develop a new and more elastic skin every week for the period of five weeks. The time for the shedding of one skin to the shedding of the next is considered or called one stage of life, and in the last stage the worm has accumulated so much food and transformed the same into a uniform solution of silky constituents as it deems sufficient to enable it to build a nest or a house around itself, in which it expects to remain unprotected from the attacks of enemies while laying dormant during its transformation from a worm to a butterfly. In that dormant state of chrysalis, when imagining to be safe from all outside enemies, within the artistically-built house, the cocoon, it is mercilessly murdered by men, wilfully destroyed to satisfy the growing sense of vanity of men, or, rather, women."

"Of course, the killing is necessary if we are to derive the full benefit from the cocoon, because if we allow the chrysalis inside the cocoon to develop into a butterfly, the latter will pierce the cocoon and destroy the thread at so many places that it would render the unwinding of the fine silk filaments an impossibility. A very small proportion of all these millions of silk worms are enjoying the privilege to grow to maturity, the butterfly, the female one of which upon maturity and all within a few hours' time, lays from 5 to 600 eggs, which will make up a new generation a year afterwards."

"The time required for the transformation from the full-grown worm into a butterfly varies somewhat and is influenced by climatic conditions, but on an average it does not take longer than three weeks. Therefore, the wholesale killing must be affected within these three weeks. In lots of hundreds of thousands are the cocoons thrown into an especially constructed oven and therein baked at a certain rate of heat until all life is extinguished."

There was much more in Mr. Hofer's address that was particularly interesting to the men interested in the manufacture of hosiery and underwear who heard him.

Elevated Clothes Closet.

Changeroom lockers in German collieries are being abandoned and their place taken by anchors on which the clothes are hung and then raised nearly to the ceiling. Each miner has his anchor and there is a lock on the rope or chain by which it is raised and lowered. Security is thus obtained and, as the rooms are built high, excellent ventilation is secured.—Engineering and Mining Journal.

Appropriate Fate.

"How did your wife come out in the argument with the carpet man?" "Oh, she floored him."

Requisites.

"Can the girl cook a good dinner?" "Can the young man earn the materials to cook it with?"

William C. Redfield, secretary of commerce, in commenting on the detailed figures concerning the imports and exports of the United States for the month of March and the nine months ended March, said: "The figures are striking, both in their magnitude and in their details. The aggregate business, inward and outward, of the United States with foreign countries for the nine months was a little in excess of $3,300,000,000—an impressive total, which if maintained at the same rate would bring the business for the entire fiscal year well in excess of $4,100,000,000."

"Great Britain is our largest customer, buying from us over $478,000,000, and selling us over $234,000,000, an aggregate for the nine months in excess of $712,000,000, or a total business of nearly $80,000,000 a month. Canada is our second best customer, buying from us $300,000,000 in nine months, equal to nearly $1,300,000 every working day. A pretty fair customer, that. Then Germany comes third, buying $268,000,000 from us in nine months and selling us $146,000,000. She is a pretty fair customer, too—buys over $1,000,000 a day. And fourth comes France, to whom we sold $120,000,000, and from whom we bought $112,000,000."

"The figures for the entire nine months are such as to give just pride to every thoughtful American to whose notice they come. Out of the total transactions of $3,300,000,000 there is a balance in our favor of a little over $500,000,000. Doing pretty well. But a few comparisons with 1912 make it look even better. For example, our sales of manufactures for further use in manufacturing increased over $56,000,000 and our sales of manufactures ready for use increased over the same period last year $88,500,000, an increase in these two lines of manufactured goods alone of over $114,500,000, as compared with the same period of last year."

Typhoid Death Toll Reduced.

Pointing to the number of deaths from typhoid fever for the year 1911 as being the lowest on record, the statement of the bureau of the census declares, however, that this is far in excess of the mortality from this cause in progressive European country. This reduction, it says, "indicates that the public health officials of the country and the people who support their efforts are awakening to the necessity of wiping out this fifth disease."

The statement declares that in 1911 there were 12,451 deaths from this cause in the registration area. This is a death rate of 21 per 100,000 compared with 23.5 the year previous.

Lower death rates are also noted in tuberculosis, measles, scarlet fever, cancer, infantile paralysis and organic disease of the heart.

Increases were shown in the deaths from pellagra, suicide and violent deaths excluding suicide.

The increase in the mortality from pellagra was large, according to the statement. During the early part of the decade, 1900 to 1909, the reported mortality from this disease was insignificant, two deaths being returned for 1900, two for 1903 and one for 1904. For 1908, 23 deaths were returned, all of which occurred in southern cities. A large increase was shown in 1909, during which 116 deaths were reported, and a still larger increase for 1910, when 368 deaths were reported as due to this disease.

The mortality of 659 for 1911, as compared with 368 for 1910, indicates an increase of 79 per cent.

An important statement in the census bureau's paper is that organic diseases of the heart in 1911 caused more deaths, 83,625, than any other disease or group of diseases shown in the abridged international list, although the number of deaths from tuberculosis of all forms, 94,205, was considerably greater. However, the death rate from organic heart trouble in 1911 was slightly lower than that for the preceding year, but the rate for these two years is declared to be much higher than that of previous years.

After reading that so many congressmen had obtained their election to the house of representatives "without spending a dollar" it was refreshing to hear one southern member the other day admit to a few intimates that if he were called before the bar of justice he would have to acknowledge that he had bought votes to secure his nomination and election.

"It was a case of necessity, though," he added, "because my opponent was doing the same thing."

The congressman went on to relate an incident of the last November elections.

I overheard my campaign manager talking with one of his assistants. The latter was protesting that a voter had taxed him $5 for his vote.

"My manager exclaimed angrily: 'I won't stand for it. It is an outrage.'

"We have never paid more than $3 for his vote. But then I suppose the other side has been after him. However, before we let the other party get him I reckon we will have to meet his figure. Hold him down, though, if you can."

A new member of congress who was present was frankly amazed.

"Suppose detectives should have heard your manager admit he was buying votes?"

"Well," replied the other, "detectives did come to my district once, but the sheriff arrested them for carrying concealed weapons."

Apropos of the incorporation of the New York Stock Exchange, Theodore P. Shantz said the other day:

"Doubtless the incorporation of the exchange will be a good thing. I deprecate, though, the idea, that there is a low standard of honor among stock brokers. Why, to hear some people talk, you'd think there were so many crooks on the stock exchange that every sentence contained an in- uendo—like the San Quentin prison tale, you know."

Of all the subjects that come under the general head of "Conservation" none, perhaps, is more important than that of the conservation of the health and the energies of woman. The National Conservation Exposition—an Exposition not local in scope, but national—will have its Woman's building. In this building will be shown hundreds and thousands of things that appeal to women. It will be a building for the women and under the charge of women. Mrs. Horace Van Deventer, of Knoxville, a daughter of Justice Horace Lurton of the Supreme Court of the United States, is president of the General Woman's Board of the Exposition and she is being assisted in her work by a large corps of enthusiastic women of the South. Women's boards to further the work, to arrange for exhibits and to develop plans that have been made are being formed in different communities and in different states. Hopkinsville did better at Clarksville than it did at home last week, winning both the Saturday and Sunday games. The last game was played at Clarksville yesterday. Today, Henderson comes for a series on the home grounds and there will be ball here every day this week.

Up to yesterday Hopkinsville had won 6 and Clarksville 4 games of this season contests.

At Cairo John Nairn was fined $50 and suspended ten days for fighting Umpire Dawkins.

The games on the 4th were pooled and divided, netting each of the eight teams something over $150.

President Bassett has traded Umpire Ryan to the Kansas League for Umpire Newsome. Ryan is the man who called "Stokes" and "Bools."

FOUR CARS

Of Clarksville People Here On Glorious Fourth.

The Clarksville rooters that came here Friday afternoon were as fine a lot of baseball fans as could be found and they deported themselves like the ladies and gentlemen they are. They are always welcome to Hopkinsville and we were glad to see them enjoy their stay in the city.

In the Good Year 1872

FORTY-ONE YEARS AGO WE MADE THE

First Mogul Wagon

And lo, it was found to be good--good to last, good to carry big loads, good value for its cost.

It Is Still Good Goods

Still bought by good farmers, and will continue to be for a good while. You have a good crop of wheat; if you haven't a good wagon to move it, be good enough to step right this way and get one--Remember the Mogul.

Bob Taylor Lives,

In the two bright and beautiful books just issued, "Lectures and Best Literary Productions," and "Life and Career" of Senator Robert Love Taylor, handsomely illustrated, you cannot hear again his voice or see the humorous curl of his lips, that convulsed a continent with laughter, but, within the covers of these volumes, are the pictures woven of his wondrous words, and, laughing through their sunny pages, are all of the imitable stories which he told to the multitudes. In "Life and Career," pens of genius have traced his romantic life from its morning in "Happy Valley," through his young and roseate dreams through stress and storm, through cheering throngs, and on into the waiting shadows, loved and laurel crowned.

We expect to sell millions of these books. First edition going fast.
